

Which books get children begging for more? Younger readers often choose a book because they like the illustration on the front cover! More experienced readers might choose a book that is on their favourite subject or by their favourite author. So, how do you choose books for children? Here are some ideas.

Ask around! Check with your children's friends what they have enjoyed reading or ask other parents what their children are reading at the moment. Get to know your local librarians and ask them which authors children of a particular age usually enjoy.

Books for babies and pre-schoolers should be in their home language where possible. Try translating books that have very few words yourself if they are not published in the language you need. Also look out for home language books for older children – nothing beats reading a story in your own language!

Babies like brightly coloured pictures, or photographs of objects or people with simple text. They also love the rhythms of language, so books with repetition and rhyme usually Wordless books are a great investment because you get the chance to tell a story to your children in your own way in any language you like - and then they can create their own stories with the books too.

They say that variety is the spice of life. This is true with books too. Choose some books that reflect things that will be familiar to your children – for example, books in which the homes look like your children's. And, choose other books that provide new experiences, like stories set in different places

When children can already read, it's best to choose some books that they can read on their own and some books (with more complicated language and plots) that you can read to them.

Stories about difficult things in children's lives like the arrival of a baby, illness, divorce or friendship challenges – can help them process their feelings and face their fears.

Information books are not just for older children. Factual books help children to learn about our world and encourage them to be curious!

The author of this edition's cut-out-and-keep book (Ouma Ruby's secret) on pages 3 to 6 is Chris Van Wyk. Chris was born in Soweto and lived most of his life in Johannesburg. He was not only a children's author and a poet, but he wrote over 20 books that include two autobiographies and books for teenagers. He was also a brilliant storyteller and we were lucky enough to have him join us at the launch of our Children's Literacy Charter on World Book Day in 2014. Sadly, Chris passed away not long after this on 3 October 2014. Nal'ibali will miss his passion for storytelling and the way in which he could make words dance across a page, but his warmth and talent will live on, every time we share one of his stories! Here are some of them that you might enjoy.

- Ouma Ruby's secret (Giraffe Books/Pan Macmillan), is available in all South African languages.
- Nelson Mandela: Long walk to freedom (Macmillan), is the children's version of Nelson Mandela's autobiography. It is also available in all South African languages.
- Shirley, Goodness and Mercy and Eggs to lay, chickens to hatch (Pan Macmillan) are the stories of Chris' childhood in Riverlea, Johannesburg. These books for older readers are a wonderful mix of funny and sad moments.

Did you know?

- Chris van Wyk's best-known poem, In Detention, is studied at high schools and universities across the world. It is about the suspicious way in which political prisoners in South Africa died during apartheid.
- When he was five Chris told his parents he wanted to be a writer!
- Chris won a number of awards for his writing, including the 2007 IBBY SA Best Picture Book Award for Ouma Ruby's secret.

Everyone was spellbound as Chris told the story of Ouma Ruby's secret at Nal'ibali's celebration of World Book Day 2014.

Ouma Ruby's secret Lekunutu la Nkgono Ruby

> Chris van Wyk Anneliese Voigt-Peters

Empa Nkgono a tsheha feela a re, "O tla bona, o tla bona."

"Lekunutu ke lefe?" ho botsa Chris.

Nkgono Ruby a mo aka a ba a mo phumula mofufutso o nkong.

But Ouma just laughs and says, "You'll see, you'll see."

"What's the surprise?" asks Chris.

Ouma Ruby kisses him and wipes the sweat off his nose.

"Ao! Ke a leboha, Nkgono."

"O ka nna wa kgetha tse pedi," o rialo.

Ba kena ka lebenkeleng. Ho tletse dibuka hohle. Dibuka tse mabapi le ditshibollo, ho hahlaula, letsatsi le dinaledi, batho le dibaka tsa Afrika. Nkgono Ruby o sheba setloholo sa hae se nyakalletseng mme o a bososela.

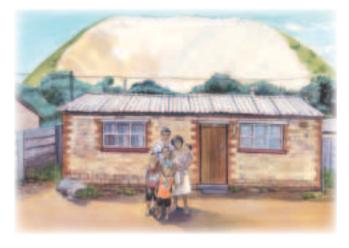

"Wow! Thanks, Ouma."

"You may choose two," she says.

They walk into the shop. There are books everywhere. Books about adventure, travel, the sun and the stars, the people and places of Africa. Ouma Ruby looks at her excited grandson and she smiles.

This is the story of a real boy and a real ouma. Ena ke pale ya nnete ya moshanyana le nkgono.

A long time ago miners dug into the earth for gold and they left behind this mountain of yellow sand and rock. From the top of the mine dump the houses and the cars and the people look like toys. Down below is a suburb called Riverlea. And 13 Flinders Street is where Chris lives with his mom and dad, two brothers and sister.

Mehleng ya kgalekgale basebetsi ba merafong ba kile ba tjheka gauta ka tlase ho lefatshe mme ba siya thaba ena e tshehla ya lehlabathe le mafika. Ha o tadima o le ka hodima thotobolo ya morafo matlo le dikoloi le batho di shebahala jwaloka dibapadiswa. Tlase mane ho na le motsetoropo o bitswang Riverlea. Mme 13 Flinders Street ke moo ho dulang Chris le mmae le ntatae, baena ba babedi le kgaitsedi.

"Your Ouma can't read," says Mom. "Your Ouma can't read."

Chris looks at his Ouma. He is surprised.

"But I can read it to her," he says. And he does.

"I love you too, Chris," says Ouma and Chris gives her a birthday hug.

"Nkgono wa hao ha a tsebe ho bala," ho rialo Mme. "Nkgono wa hao ha a tsebe ho bala."

Chris o sheba ho Nkgono wa hae. O maketse.

"Empa nka nna ka mmalla yona," o rialo. Mme a etsa jwalo.

"Le nna ke a o rata, Chris," ho rialo Nkgono mme Chris o mo haka ka tsela e loketseng letsatsi la tswalo.

Nkgono o lefa monna ya emeng kamora khaontara. Chris o qala ho bala dibuka tsa hae hanghang.

"O kgethile hantle," ho rialo nkgonwae.

O kgetha dibuka tse pedi mme o di phahamisetsa hodimo hore a di bone. Nkgono Ruby o rwala diborele tsa hae tsa ho bala. Mme o phetla maqephe butle bukeng ka nngwe.

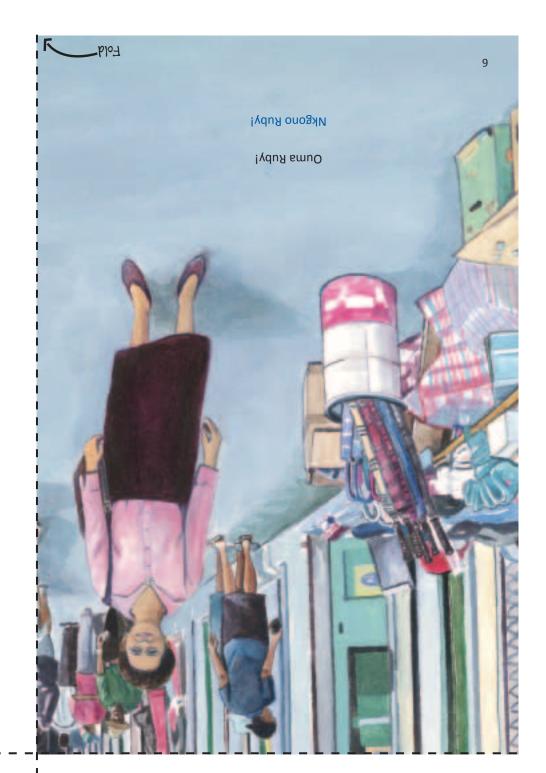

Ouma pays the man behind the counter. Chris begins to read his books straight away.

"Good choices," she says.

each book.

He chooses two books and holds them up for her to see. Ouma Ruby puts on her reading glasses. Then she pages slowly through

"What is this, son?" she says.

"It's a letter, Ouma, for you. Read it. Read it out loud." $\,$

"Not now, Chris," she says. "Later."

"No, Ouma. You must read it now."

"I don't have my glasses," says Ouma.

"I'll fetch them for you," says Chris.

Chris's mom pulls him away from Ouma. "Leave your Ouma alone," says Mom.

"But I just want her to read the letter," he says.

"Ke eng hona, mora?" o rialo.

"Ke lengolo la hao Nkgono. Le bale. Le balle hodimo."

"Eseng hona jwale Chris," o rialo. "Ka mora nakwana."

"Tjhe, Nkgono. O tshwanela ho le bala hona jwale."

"Ha ke a rwala diborele tsa ho bala," ho rialo Nkgono.

"Ke tla o latela tsona" ho rialo Chris.

Mma Chris a hula Chris ho mo tlosa ho Nkgono. "Tlohela Nkgono wa hao," ho rialo Mme.

"Empa ke batla feela hore a bale lengolo," o rialo.

Chris loves reading. He reads anything: books, comics, magazines, even the label on the tomato sauce bottle.

Chris o rata ho bala. O bala ntho e nngwe le e nngwe: dibuka, dikhomiki, dimakasine, esitana le dileibole tse botlolong ya tamatisousu.

S

O ema sekgutlong sa seterata sa Pritchard le sa Diagonal. O emela Nkgono Ruby. Batho ba makgolo moo, empa e seng Nkgono Ruby. Na ebe o tlile ka letsatsi le nepahetseng? Ebe sekgutlo seo a leng ho sona ke se nepahetseng?

Chris a hlapa mme a tena borikgwe bo bokgutshwane bo botsho le hempe e bolou. A tlolela ka beseng e yang toropong.

Hoseng ho hong Chris a raoha diphateng. Kantle letsatsi le tjhabile. Dirobele le maebanakgorwana di bina di le difateng le hodima mehala ya matla a motlakase. Chris o thabile haholo hobane kajeno ke letsatsi la bohlokwa. O tshwanela ho teana le nkgonwae toropong. Empa hobaneng? Ha a tsebe. Seo a se boletseng feela ke, "O tla bona."

He stands on the corner of Pritchard and Diagonal streets. He waits for Ouma Ruby. Hundreds of people walk past, but not Ouma Ruby. Does he have the right day? The right corner? The right ...

Chris has a bath and gets dressed in his black shorts and blue shirt. He hops onto a bus that goes into town.

One morning Chris jumps out of bed. Outside the sun is shining. The sparrows and turtle doves are singing in the trees and on the power lines. Chris is excited because today is a special day. He has to meet his oums in town. But why? He doesn't know. All she had said was, "You'll see."

Chris' granny is Ouma Ruby. She lives in Coronation. That's quite a walk away. You can chew the sweetness out of three Chappies' bubblegums before you reach Ouma's house.

Chris loves going to visit Ouma Ruby. She has fruit trees in her yard and in summer the branches sag with the weight of peaches, apricots and grapes. The mulberries give everyone a purple smile.

Dozens of cousins, uncles and aunts all live at Ouma Ruby's house. There's always someone singing, playing music on a home-made guitar, or making jokes. That's why Chris loves going to Ouma Ruby's for the school holidays.

Nkgono wa Chris ke Nkgono Ruby. O dula Coronation. Moo a dulang ho hlile ho sebakana. Dichappies tse tharo di fela monate pele o fihla ha Nkgono.

Chris o rata ho etela Nkgono Ruby. O na le difate tsa ditholwana jareteng ya hae, mme nakong ya lehlabula makala a tsona a hohoba fatshe ke boima ba diperekisi, diapolekose le morara. Dimurubeie tsona di etsa hore bohle ba be perese ka hanong ha ba tsheha.

Dibekeng tse pedi tse latelang ke letsatsi le ikgethileng. Ke la 29 Motsheanong, letsatsi la tswalo la Nkgono Ruby.

Now Chris is happy.

I love you. Chris."

Chris writes: "Dear Ouma, I wish you a happy birthday today. Thank you for buying me books and for letting me spend all my holidays at your home.

Chris has an idea. I will write her a letter, he thinks. In the letter I will tell her how much I love her. I will ask her to read it out at the party so that everyone can hear how much I love her. That will be my gift to Ouma Ruby!

a blue scarf. But he has no money.

But why is Chris not happy? Because everyone is going to Ouma's party and he does not have a gift for her. He wanted to buy her a purse. Or earnings. Or

Two weeks later is a special day. It is 29 May, Ouma Ruby's birthday.

Everybody is at the party: uncles, aunts, boy cousins, girl cousins, teenage cousins and baby cousins. And on the table! Chocolate cake and rainbow cake, biscuits and sweets, samoosas and curry balls, cooldrink and tea. And Ouma Ruby, smiling and happy while everybody sings, "Happy Birthday to you!"

Chris takes his letter from his pocket and goes up to Ouma Ruby. He gives her the letter.
