Spread the word!

Each year on 21 February, the world celebrates International Mother Language Day. This event shines the spotlight on just how important it is to preserve and protect all languages used by all groups of people throughout the world! And nothing could be more relevant for South Africa, as Carole Bloch, Director of PRAESA, explains.

“ It’s normal to use our mother tongue every day, isn’t it? No, it’s not! It is actually only normal for mother tongue English speakers, and some Afrikaans speakers, to carry out their daily business in their mother tongue (or home language). Most people in South Africa do not have this privilege.

I am often asked why I think most school children in South Africa do so badly at reading and writing. Well, think about how shaky their foundations are – apart from anything else, most children have to switch to a language they barely know after only three years at school – usually English! That means doing all of their reading, writing, learning, tests and examinations in this language. Many people think that our children would be even more disadvantaged without English. But here’s the point: it’s not a matter of pitching English against African languages! It’s about using African languages as well as English, not one at the expense of the other. We have to use all of our languages, especially in print, to develop and value them.

To understand and communicate at school, you need to use a language you know. You need to be given the opportunity to see and understand the world through your own language so that you’re more likely to be motivated and inspired to learn new things. And then, to get to know a new language, you need teachers who are well-trained and language role models.

And, of course to learn to read, you need lots of books and stories. In South Africa, we have great children’s literature from around the world, including stories from Africa, but these stories are mainly in English. Don’t all children in 21st century South Africa deserve books and stories in their mother tongues so that they can be nurtured into the magic and wonder of reading?

This year, on 21 February, help spread the word about the importance of using your home language/s to grow children’s literacy. ”

Sharing stories in different ways

Zanele Ndlovu is the author of our cut-out-and-keep book on pages 3 to 6. She is also a storyteller, actress, song writer, musician, dancer and publisher. Zanele's inspiring work has taken her all over the African continent where she has performed at many different kinds of festivals. Recently we spent some time chatting to this talented and passionate Story Star about stories and reading.

Who told you stories when you were a child?

My aunts and cousins at my grandmother's house. They used to tell me my grandfather's story called Xinyaragwegwe which is Xitsonga.

When did you start telling stories? Who did you tell them to?

I started telling stories when I was twelve. I told them to my aunts and cousins during the school holidays.

What is your favourite story to tell?

I love "The boy who cried wolf". It has a good lesson: If you lie about being in trouble, when you really need help, no one will be there to help you because they won't believe you!

Where do you get your stories from?

From books and from storytellers on the radio and at live performances. I also make up my own stories.

What language/s do you tell and write stories in?

I tell my stories in my mother tongue, isiZulu, and also in English. I write my stories in isiZulu because I think it's important to preserve my mother tongue – many people can't read and write in isiZulu. Then I translate my stories into other languages.

How are stories that are told, different from written stories?

When you tell a story, it benefits only the people who are there at the time, unless they pass it on. When you write that story down, it will be there for generations to come.

Do you ever read a book more than once?

Yes! Some books can't be read only once!

My favourite place to read is ...

... in a tree!

Deel stories op verskillende maniere

Zanele Ndlovu is die skrywer van die knip-uit-en-bêreboekie op bladsye 3 tot 6. Sy is ook 'n storieverteller, aktrise, liedjieskrywer, musikant, danser en uitgewer. Zanele se inspirerende werk het haar al na die hele vasteland van Afrika geneem, waar sy by baie verskillende soorte feeste opgetree het. Ons het onlangs met hierdie talentvolle en passiewolle Storiester oor stories en lees gesels.

Wie het vir jou stories vertel toe jy 'n kind was?

My tantes en niggies en neefs by my ouma se huis. Hulle het vir my my oupa se storie, Xinyaragwegwe vertel, wat in Xitsonga is.

Wanneer het jy begin stories vertel? Vir wie het jy stories vertel?

Ek het begin stories vertel toe ek twaalf jaar oud was. Ek het hulle in die skoolvakansies vir my tantes en niggies en neefs vertel.

Wat is jou gunstelingstorie om te vertel?

Ek hou van die storie oor die seun wat "wolf" geskree het. Dit het 'n goeie les. As jy jog en sê dat jy in die moeilikheid is, sal niemand daar wees om jou te help wanneer jy regtig hulp nodig het nie, want hulle sal jou nie glo nie!

Waar kry jy jou stories vandaan?

Van boeke en van storievertellers op die radio en by regstreekse optredes. Ek maak ook my eie stories op.

In watter tale vertel en skryf jy stories?

Ek vertel stories in my moedertaal, isiZulu, en ook in Engels. Ek skryf my stories in isiZulu, want ek dink dit is belangrik om my moedertaal te bewaar – baie mense kan nie isiZulu lees of skryf nie. Dan vertaal ek my stories in ander tale.

Hoe verskil stories wat vertel word van geskrewe stories?

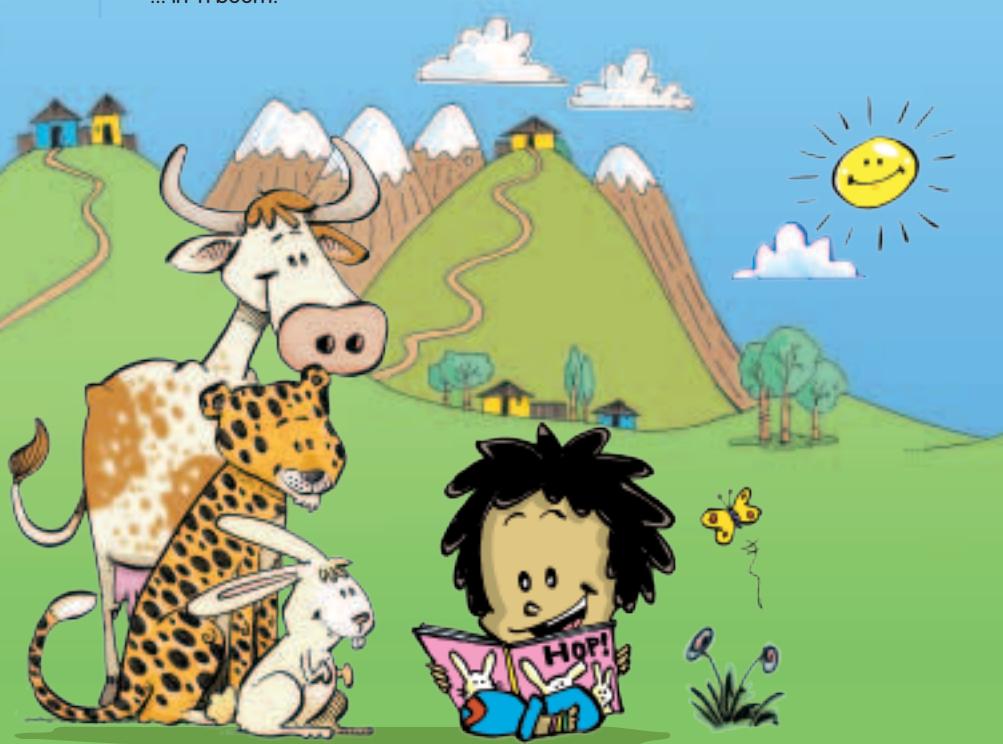

Wanneer jy 'n storie vertel, baat net die mense wat op daardie tydstip daar is daarby, tensy hulle dit oorvertel. Wanneer jy daardie storie neerskryf, sal dit daar wees vir die volgende geslagte.

Lees jy ooit 'n boek meer as een keer?

Ja! Sommige boeke kan nie net een keer gelees word nie!

Die plek waar ek die graagste lees is ...

... in 'n boom!

UMakhweyane is published by Izilimi Zase-Afrika which publishes books in the indigenous languages of Africa in order to help preserve them. Izilimi Zase-Afrika was started in 2014 by Zanele Ndlovu. Zanele is a social activist and artist – she is a storyteller and writer, and plays indigenous African musical instruments. As part of her work she visits schools, children's homes and community centres where she runs creative writing workshops and tells stories.

UMakhweyane is currently available in isiZulu, but there are plans to make it available in other South African languages too. To order a copy, email Izilimi.zaseafrika@gmail.com.

UMakhweyane word uitgegee deur Izilimi Zase-Afrika, wat boeke in die inheemse tale van Afrika uitgee om dié tale te help bewaar. Izilimi Zase-Afrika is in 2014 deur Zanele Ndlovu begin. Zanele is 'n sosiale aktivis en kunstenaar – sy is 'n storieverteller en skrywer, en sy bespeel inheemse Afrika-musiekinstrumente. As deel van haar werk besoek sy kinderhuise en gemeenskapsentrum waar sy werkinkels in skeppende skryfwerk aanbied, en stories vertel.

UMakhweyane is tans in isiZulu beskikbaar, maar daar is planne om dit ook in ander Suid-Afrikaanse tale beskikbaar te stel. Om 'n eksemplaar te bestel, stuur 'n e-pos aan Izilimi.zaseafrika@gmail.com.

UMAKHWEYANE

Zanele Ndlovu
Charlotte Hill O'Neal

Op daardie oomblik hoor Nozulu 'n stem uit die woon. Nem jou kinders na haar toe." Daardie persoon is Gogo Bavikile, wat op Mount Bees te help. Net een persoon kan jou kinders laat ophou hul. Deel jou py. Die goede ding is dat ek 'n manier het om jou ongelukkig te sien, Nozulu, my kind," se die stem. "Ek avokadopeertoom agter haar. "Dit is so hartseer om jou kinders te laat verander!"

Even ooggend word Nozulu weer drie-oor wakker en gaan veld toe om te bid. "Ek se dankie dat ek met my pragtige tweeling gesêen is," se sy, en hul bitterlik. "Ek is so lief."

Nozulu is bekommert. Sy het dae laas geslaap en sy geniet nog nie een keer sien lag nie! Ek het hulp nodig om my ophou hul van die dag dat hulle gespose is nie! Ek het hulle vir hulle, maar daar's net een probleem – hulle het nog nie tweeling gesêen is," se sy, en hul bitterlik. "Ek is so lief."

"Daardie heks is al weer besig met haar uMakhweyane!" se van Tshopiya dat Gogo Bavikile iets hiermee te doen het. dit nie om 'n ma te wees nie. En nou vermoed die mense Nozulu is uitgevind. Sy het die heks gevonden en gesê: "Want hulle dag en nag want hulle veronderveld is om te slap. "Waa! waa!"

A long time ago, an old woman called Bavikile lived high up on the slopes of Mount Bees.

Although the village of Tshopiya was nearby, Gogo Bavikile wasn't allowed to live there. The trouble was that she played an ancient African instrument called uMakhweyane – the love bow. Because the villagers didn't know this instrument, or even the tree from which it was made, they thought Gogo Bavikile was a witch. So she lived all alone, with only the birds, the buck, the trees and the stars for company.

Lank gelede het 'n ou vrou met die naam Bavikile hoog teen die hange van Mount Bees gewoon.

Al was die dorpie Tshopiya daar naby, mag Gogo Bavikile nie daar gewoon het nie. Die probleem was dat sy 'n ou Afrika-instrument, die uMakhweyane, of liefdesboog, bespeel het. Omdat die mense van die dorpie nie hierdie instrument geken het nie, of selfs die boom waarvan dit gemaak is nie, het hulle gedink Gogo Bavikile is 'n heks. Sy het daarom stoksielalleen gewoon, met net die voëls, die bokkies, die bome en die sterre vir geselskap.

"Of course, Gogo," replied Nozulu. "We will definitely visit you once a week."

"I would be happy if you visited me at least once a week," replied Gogo Bavikile. "I have no family and no human friends – my friends are the birds, the buck, the trees and

"Never grow tired of doing good! How can I repay you for helping me?" she said at last. "Thank you so much, Gogo. Amazing!" She laughed and cried at the same time. "This is happy! She laughed and cried – for the first time since their birth seven months earlier, her children were and laughing! Nozulu was amazed – for the first time and Mlilo's children started smiling, giggling about At this, something unbelievable happened. Nozulu played it. While she played, she sang a nursery rhyme. Gogo took the children from their mother and put one on her back and the other one on her chest, the same way their mother had. Then, she took her uMakhweyane and

"You know, Gogo, my children have cried day and night of the avocado tree, a voice told me that you're the only crying!" explained Nozulu. "When I was playing in front ever since they were born – even now you can see they're

"Let's go inside, and you can explain your problem to me," said Gogo, picking up Nozulu's bag

At this, the people danced, sang and had a good time ... and so did the twins!

From that day onwards, the villagers never accused Gogo Bavikile of witchcraft again. Instead, they climbed Mount Bees to visit her, and learnt to play and make uMakhweyane. They were always happy, and they loved and had great respect for the instrument. Gogo was happy too, because she had people around her to teach. As for Nozulu and Mlilo's children, they were the happiest of all. They grew up singing and playing the uMakhweyane, and calling Gogo Bavikile their great grandmother.

Cosi cosi iyaphela. And here I rest my story.

Toe het die mense gedans, gesing en hulself geniet ... en die tweeling ook!

Van daardie dag af het die mense van die dorpie nooit meer gesê Gogo Bavikile is 'n heks nie. Hulle het eerder Mount Bees uitgeklim om vir haar te gaan kuiер, en geleer om die uMakhweyane te bespeel en te maak. Hulle was altyd gelukkig, en hulle was baie lief vir die instrument en het groot respek daarvoor gehad. Gogo was ook gelukkig, want sy het mense om haar gehad vir wie sy kon leer. En Nozulu en Mlilo se kinders was die gelukkigste van almal. Hulle het grootgeword, en baie gesing en die uMakhweyane bespeel, en hulle het vir Gogo Bavikile oumagrootjie genoem.

Cosi icoci yaphela. Fluit-fluit, my storie is uit.

“U weet, Goggo, my kinders hui dag en naag vandat hulle geboore is – u kan sien hulle hui selfs nou!” verduidelik. Nozulu, “Toe ek voor die avokadopeerboom gekbid het, ha ‘n stem vir my gesê u is die enigste een wat my met hierdie geboore is – u kan sien hulle hui selfs nou!” Goggo vat die kinders by hulle ma en sit een op hhaar rug en Toe neem sy haar Umkhwayane en begin daarop speel. Terwyl sy speel, sing sy ‘n kinderrympie.

En toe gebeur iets ongelooflike. Nozulu en Millio se kinders begin gemitteel en lê! Nozulu is verstom – vi die ander een op hhaar bors, net soos hulle ma gesoeien het. En toe gebeurt iets ongelooflike. Nozulu se kinders begin gemitteel en lê! Nozulu is verstom – vi die eerste keert vandat hulle sewe manne geledre geboore is, ishaar kinders gelukkig! Sy lag en hui tegelyk. “Dit is verstommeend!” se sy uitemandek. “Baie dankie, Goggo. Moenie nooit moeg word om goed te doen nie! Hoe kan ek jou vergoed vir jou hulp?”

“Dit sal my gelukkig maak as jy ministens een keer ‘n week vir my kom kuit,” antwoord Nozulu. “Ons sal beslis een familié en geen mensvertroude nie – my vrouwe is die voëlf die boekies, die bomme en die sterre. Jy is die enigste mens wat ek ken.”

Nozuru and Mijo were overjoyed with their beautiful children, and so was the community. There was only one problem — the twins cried non-stop! “Wah! wah!” they cried when they were fed. “Wah! wah!” they cried, even when they were supposed to be asleep. “Wah! wah!” they cried when they were awake. And now, the villagers of Tshopiya suspected that Gogo Bavikile was behind this too. “That which is at it again with her U Makhwyanec!” they said. “Even though we chased her away, she hasn’t mended her ways!”, Nozuru was worried. She hadn’t slept for ages, and she wasn’t enjoying motherhood. And now, the villagers of Tshopiya woke up at three o’clock, and went out to pray in the field. “I give thanks for the blessing of my beautiful twins,” she said, sobbing bitterly, “I love them to bits, but there’s just one problem — they have not stopped crying since the day they were born! Never once have I seen them laughing! I need some help to make my children change!”, At that moment, Nozuru heard a voice from the avocado tree behind her. “It’s so sad to see you unhappy, Nozuru, my child,” said the voice. “I share your pain.” The good thing is that I have a way to help you. Only one person can make you children stop crying. That person is Gogo Bavikile, who lives up on Mount Bees.

Uitwendelk word Nozulu se gebede verhoor, en sy word met 'n tweeling gesêen.

Mar Nozulu het dit nie gegeilo nie. Sy het elke ooggaand vyande hulle koppe in skamte laat hang. "Skepper van die hemel en die aarde," het sy elke keer oor my en sê ek is getoot. Mag ek gesêen word, en hierdie gesê, "seen asseblief my familie met kinders. Mensé kinders bid, "Toekomstige kinders moet my familie met kinders gesê, "seen asseblief my familie met kinders. Die storie hierbo is in Engels geskryf deur Machika Ntswaki van die Dynamaid Diamond-leesklub. So klink die storie: Toek my oë toegemaak het, het ek 'n kat en melk gesien. Die kat wou die melk drink, maar sy was bang haar eienaar sou op haar skree. Die kat het op die vloer gesit en wou die melk drink, want sy was baie honger.

Story corner

Here is the last part of the story about how a young boy helped Baboon and Monkey to learn an important lesson. Enjoy reading or retelling it!

Phindulo and the pumpkin (Part 2)

By Kai Tuomi

"Yes, Phindulo, but what are we going to do about the pumpkin?" asked Monkey.

"I don't know," said Phindulo. "But I can tell you what we did with the apples."

"What?" asked Monkey.

"We had a party," said Phindulo.

"A party?" asked Baboon.

"That's right," said Phindulo. "We had a big party. We invited everyone. There were friends and neighbours, gogos and grandpas, cousins, nieces and nephews. We decorated our little house with streamers and balloons. Mama made her special apple pies and tata squeezed the older apples into delicious, cool apple juice. We played games together and danced. It really was a lot of fun. And everyone ate until they were full and happy."

"I love parties," said Monkey.

"Well, why don't we have a party?" suggested Baboon.

"Good idea," said Monkey. "We can share the pumpkin and eat it together!"

"That's wonderful!" said Phindulo, laughing.

Baboon gave Monkey a big hug.

"Will you come to our party?" Monkey asked Phindulo.

"I would love to," he said.

Baboon and Monkey smiled happily. And the three friends cooked the very big pumpkin. They each made different things to eat. Monkey baked a pie with a golden crust and gooey centre. Baboon made a spicy soup. Phindulo fried up sweet fritters with cinnamon and sugar!

They did not have any streamers or balloons, but they played games and sang songs and ate as much pumpkin as they wanted.

Soon, other animals arrived. Elephant brought sweet marulas and nuts. Giraffe came with bottles of bubbling spring water to wash down the delicious food. Even Warthog was there with delicious sweet potatoes.

Everyone shared their food and drink. They all laughed and sang and ate until the sun hung low in the sky, like a big ripe melon.

Storiehoekie

Hier volg die laaste deel van die storie oor hoe 'n jong seun vir Bobbejaan en Apie 'n belangrike les geleer het. Geniet dit om dit te lees of oor te vertel!

Phindulo en die pampoen (Deel 2)

Deur Kai Tuomi

"Ja, Phindulo, maar wat gaan ons omtrent die pampoen doen?" vra Apie.

"Ek weet nie," sê Phindulo. "Maar ek kan vir julle vertel wat ons met die appels gedoen het."

"Wat?" vra Apie.

"Ons het 'n partytjie gehou," sê Phindulo.

"'n Partytjie?" vra Bobbejaan.

"Dis reg," sê Phindulo. "Ons het 'n groot partytjie gehou. Ons het almal genooi. Daar was vriende en bure, gogo's en oupas, niggies en neefs. Ons het ons klein huisie met papierlinte en ballonne versier. Mamma het haar spesiale appelterte gemaak en tata het heerlike, koel appelsap van die ouer appels gemaak. Ons het saam speletjies gespeel en gedans. Dit was regtig baie pret. En almal het geëet tot hulle versadig en gelukkig was."

"Ek hou baie van partytjies," sê Apie

"Wel, waarom hou ons nie 'n partytjie nie?" stel Bobbejaan voor.

"Goeie idee," sê Apie. "Ons kan die pampoen deel en dit saam eet!"

"Dis wonderlik!" sê Phindulo en lag.

Bobbejaan gee vir Apie 'n stywe drukkie.

"Sal jy na ons partytjie toe kom?" vra Apie vir Phindulo.

"Ja, beslis," sê hy.

Bobbejaan en Apie glimlag bly. En die drie vriende kook die enorme pampoen. Hulle maak elkeen 'n verskillende geregt om te eet. Apie bak 'n tert met 'n goudbruin kors en 'n heerlike pampoenvulsel. Bobbejaan maak 'n pikante pampoensoep. Phindulo bak pampoenkoekies met kaneelsuiker!

Hulle het nie papierlinte of ballonne nie, maar hulle speel speletjies en sing liedjies en eet soveel pampoen as wat hulle wil hê.

Sommer gou kom die ander diere ook aan. Olifant bring soet maroelas en neute saam. Kameelperd kom met bottels borrelende fonteinwater om die heerlike kos mee af te sluk. Selfs Vlakvark bring heerlik soetpatats.

Almal deel hulle kos en drinkgoed. Hulle lag en sing almal totdat die son soos 'n groot, ryp spanspek laag in die lug hang.
